SOW CLEAN SEED - NOT WEEDS

In 1918 and '19, clover seed sold above forty dollars per bushel; in 1933 and '34, for as little as five or six. In both periods, a lot of seed reached the farm containing considerable waste matter and weeds. When Clover was 70¢ per pound, people were buying seed carelessly; when 10¢ per pound, there was little money around and most buying was done on a price basis.

History is repeating itself, but so far prices are not as high. Buying is being done with better judgment but again a great deal of seed is marketed with too high a content of weeds and waste matter.

Before 1918 and every year since, no matter what seed prices have been, Scotts have carefully selected and heavily recleaned all seed. With good farm prices almost assured, we feel the best way to insure high production is by the use of clean seed.

HYBRID CORN - SOYBEANS

The supply of early Hybrid Seed Corn seems to be less than the demand. Early freezes damaged quite a lot of fields of commercial corn, so farmers are asking for hybrids earlier in maturity. As later hybrids are usually higher in yield and since the freezes of 1942 weren't typical of an average fall, the earlier hybrids should only be used where they are actually needed.

Soybeans were also affected by the early freeze or lack of manpower or equipment to get them harvested on time. So there are a lot of low germinating beans that won't do for seed. With prices on commercial beans higher and with satisfactory germinating beans hard to find, seed bean prices may be expected to be strong. Soybeans saved for seed should be well tested before the planting season.

Food production demand is great, excellent stands and high yields are needed. Now as never before, high germinating, quality seeds are essential.

Yours truly
